

You Say

Writer

Deborah Boydston

Publisher

ScribeSlice 2011

You say I'm too dumb. Maybe your just not listening.

You say I'm too smart, I act like I know everything. Don't you care for the opinions of others?

You say my beauty is fake. Maybe I'm just taking care of myself.

You say I'm ugly. Who's standards are those?

You say I'm too fat. Maybe I have a disease that I cannot help.

You say I'm too skinny. Are you Jealous?

You say I'm too young. Maybe you've stopped living.

You say I'm too old. Since when does age make one unacceptable?

You say I'm self-righteous. Should I do something against my best judgment?

You say I'm dirty, maybe it's the window your looking through.

Look through a different window and maybe you will see me. Who I really am.

Deborah Boydston

ScribeSlice